28 OCTOBER 2010 WINTERTHUR

Location: Technopark Winterthur

Workshop Outlines:

Happiness

A World unknown to the “homo oeconomicus” – New pathways for Sustainable Wealth. (Workshop Language: GERMAN)

Values such as happiness and satisfaction are foreign concepts to classical economic theories. Instead, the short-term measured increase in material wealth remains the single global benchmark for prosperity. The richest people are not always automatically the happiest, as has been publicised by the popular “Happy Planet Index”. Furthermore, new global challenges continue to question the meaningfulness of material wealth at any cost: climate change, the overstrained coping capacity of our planet, and the continually existing levels of world-wide poverty.

Our “Happiness Workshop” takes a glimpse into new ways to open prosperity beyond narrow economic dimensions.

With: Abbot Martin Werlen Benedictine Abbey of Einsiedeln Frank Bodin Club of Rome, Chairman & CEO EURO RSCG, Advertiser of the Year 2009 Prof. Mathias Binswanger Economist and Researcher on Happiness Moderator: Colette Gradwohl Editor-in-Chief, Der Landbote

Modelling & Systems Dynamics

A Workshop about the (un)predictability of Complex Systems in a Globalised World. (Workshop Language: ENGLISH)

The idea of modelling complex systems is inevitably linked to the first report of the Club of Rome, the “Limits to Growth”. Between 1970 and 1972 a project team at the Sloan School of Management at the MIT used system dynamics theories and computer modelling to analyse the long-term consequences of growth. The resulting 12 scenarios provided food for thought and substantive future scenarios for the further development of the planet. Today, almost 40 years later, the world we live in has become even more complex.

Some of the problems and developments that have been outlined in “Limits to Growth” as mere possibilities have become reality today. What can scenarios, modelling and systems dynamics contribute to a deeper understanding of critical global challenges? After all, is it a serious endeavor to develop scenarios about future trends in a world as complex as ours? And how can we make informed decisions in such an environment?

With: Wouter van Dieren IMSA Amsterdam, The Club of Rome, Oliver Adler Head of Economics and Real Estate Research, Credit Suisse Wolfgang Breyman Institute of Data Analysis and Process Design Robert Hoffman The Club of Rome Moderator: Prof. Ulrich Fuchs School of Engineering, ZHAW

TODAY'S ISSUES

28 OCTOBER 2010 WINTERTHUR

Location: Technopark Winterthur

Mobility

Switzerland as a role model for the Future of Transport? (Workshop Language: GERMAN)

Switzerland has one of the most dense and widely used public transport systems of the world. However, the seemingly inexorable increase in the mobility of both people and goods brings new challenges to the table for the system. In the last 40 years, the mobility of people has more than doubled within Switzerland, and the movement of goods has tripled over a 30 year time-span. Roughly a third of Switzerland's energy usage and 37% of CO2 Emissions fall upon the transportation sector. In today's era of virtual communication, email and video-conferencing, why is it that we are becoming more mobile? Has our previous form of mobility reached its limit? What scenarios are possible for mobility in the future? And finally: What can other countries or regions learn from Switzerland regarding every-day mobility issues?

With: Peter Füglistaler Director, Federal Office of Transport FOT Giatgen Peder Fontana President of the Board of Directors, Mobility Car Sharing Rolf Jeker Chairman of the Foundation Board, myclimate Moderator: Professor Erich Renner School of Engineering, ZHAW

Growth

The Future of a much-criticised Concept. (Workshop Language: ENGLISH)

For more than half a century, quantitative growth, expressed in GDP, has been the paramount indicator for wealth and development worldwide. It is only since the emergence of the recent economic and financial crisis that the concept of short-term oriented, purely quantitative growth has come under fire once again. What is the value of growth in the financial markets against the background of a global financial crisis that has so far cost $11.9 trillion? What is the value of material growth in general when the externalities of growth outbalance individual benefits? The EU has only recently estimated the cost of global biodiversity loss by 2050 at 14 trillion Euros. In which budget do we account for such numbers?

How should we grow and how much? Have the Club of Rome's "Limits to Growth" eventually been right?

With: Gabi Hildesheimer Club of Rome, Managing Director, öbu – Netzwerk für Nachhaltiges Wirtschaften, R. Martin Lees Club of Rome, Advisor to the Government of China Claude Martin Club of Rome, Former Director General WWF, Chancellor International University in Geneva Moderator: Christian Huggenberg Initiator Blue Tech Winterthur
